[ORIGIN from METAL noun + -IST.]
†1 A metallurgist. E17–M18.
2 An advocate of the use of a particular metal as currency or of metal as the principal or sole currency. hist. L19.

metallize /ˈmɛt(ə)lʌɪz/ verb trans. Also -ise, metalize. L16.
[ORIGIN from METAL noun + -IZE.]
1 Make metallic; give a metallic form or appearance to. L16.
2 Coat or cover with metal. E20.
■ metalli'zation noun M17. metallizer noun a machine or plant for metallizing something; a person or organization involved in metallizing something: M20.

metallo- /mɪˈtaləʊ, ˈmɛt(ə)ləʊ/ combining form of Greek metallon METAL noun: see -O-.
■ metallo'carborane noun (CHEMISTRY) a compound consisting of metal ions complexed with ligands containing carbon, boron, and hydrogen M20. me'tallocene noun (CHEMISTRY) any of a group of organometallic compounds, freq. with a sandwich structure, typified by ferrocene M20. metallochrome noun a prismatic tinting imparted to polished steel plates by depositing a film of lead oxide on them M19. me'tallochromy noun the application of metallochromes for decorative purposes M19. me'talloenzyme noun (BIOCHEMISTRY) an enzyme which is a metalloprotein M20. metallo'genesis noun = METALLOGENY E20. metallo'genetic adjective of or pertaining to metallogeny E20. metallo'genetically adverb as regards metallogeny E20. ,metallo'genic adjective (a) (of an element) occurring in ores or as the native metal, rather than in rocks; (b) = METALLOGENETIC: E20. meta'llogeny noun the origin of mineral deposits, esp. as related to petrographic and tectonic features; the branch of geology that deals with this: E20. ,metallo-or'ganic adjective (CHEMISTRY) = ORGANOMETALLIC adjective L19. me'tallophone noun a musical instrument in which the sound is produced by striking metal bars of varying pitches L19. metalloprotein noun (BIOCHEMISTRY) a protein whose molecule contains a metal atom M20. metallothionein /mɪˌtaləʊˈθʌɪənɪn/ noun (BIOCHEMISTRY) any of a group of proteins in some organisms which bind toxic heavy metals such as cadmium and mercury and so provide protection against these metals M20.

metallography /mɛtəˈlɒgrəfi/ noun. L17.
[ORIGIN from METALLO- + -GRAPHY. Cf. French métallographie.]
†1 A treatise or description of metals. L17–M19.
2 The branch of science that deals with the structure of metals, esp. on a microscopic scale; the metallographic features of something. L19.
■ metallographer noun E20. metallo'graphic adjective (a) of or pertaining to metallography; (b) of or pertaining to the description of coins: M19. metallo'graphical adjective = METALLOGRAPHIC (a) E20. metallo'graphically adverb M20.

metalloid /ˈmɛt(ə)lɔɪd/ noun & adjective. E19.
[ORIGIN from METAL noun + -OID.]
CHEMISTRY. ▸A noun. Orig., (a) a solid non-metallic element; (b) an alkali metal or an alkaline earth metal. Now, an element intermediate in its properties between a typical metal and a typical non-metal (e.g. boron, silicon, germanium). E19.
▸B attrib. or as adjective. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a metalloid. M19.
■ meta'lloidal adjective E19.

metallurgical /mɛtəˈlɜːdʒɪk(ə)l/ adjective. L18.
[ORIGIN from METALLURGY + -ICAL.]
Of or pertaining to metallurgy; concerned with metallurgy.
■ metallurgic adjective = METALLURGICAL M18. metallurgically adverb M19.

metallurgy /mɪˈtalədʒi, ˈmɛt(ə)lɜːdʒi/ noun. M17.
[ORIGIN from Greek metallon METAL noun + -ourgia work, working (as in kheirourgia SURGERY).]
The art of working metals, comprising the separation of them from other substances in the ore, smelting, and refining; spec. the process of extracting metals from their ores. Also, the branch of science that deals with the structure, properties, and behaviour of metals.
■ metallurgist noun an expert in or student of metallurgy; a worker in metal: L17.

metally /ˈmɛt(ə)li/ adjective. LME.
[ORIGIN from METAL noun & adjective + -Y¹.]
1 Metallic, metalline. obsolete exc. poet. LME.
2 Mixed with shale. dial. L19.

metalogic /mɛtəˈlɒdʒɪk/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from META- + LOGIC.]
1 The part of metaphysics which relates to the foundations of logic. Now rare. M19.
2 The field of study that deals with the processes and structures of logic. M20.
■ metalogical adjective (a) of or pertaining to metalogic; (b) that is outside the province of logic: M19. metalogically adverb in terms of or by means of metalogic M20. metalogician /-ˈdʒɪʃ(ə)n/ noun an expert in or student of metalogic E20.

metamathematics /ˌmɛtəmaθ(ə)ˈmatɪks/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from META- + MATHEMATICS.]
The field of study that deals with the structure and formal properties of mathematics and similar formal systems.
■ metamathematical adjective (a) of or pertaining to metamathematics; (b) rare that is outside the province of mathematics: M19. metamathematically adverb by means of metamathematics; from the point of view of metamathematics: M20. ,metamathematician /-ˈtɪʃ(ə)n/ noun an expert in or student of metamathematics M20.

metamer /ˈmɛtəmə/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN Back-form. from METAMERIC.]
CHEMISTRY. A compound which exhibits metamerism; a compound metameric with another.
■ Also me'tameride noun (now rare or obsolete) M19.

metamere /ˈmɛtəmɪə/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from META- + Greek meros part.] ZOOLOGY. A body segment of a metameric organism; = SOMITE.

metameric /mɛtəˈmɛrɪk/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN formed as METAMERE + -IC.]
1 CHEMISTRY. Characterized by metamerism. M19.
2 ZOOLOGY. (Of an organism) having a body consisting of several similar segments or metameres; of, pertaining to, or characterized by metamerism. L19.
■ metamerically adverb with metameric segmentation L19.

metamerism /mɪˈtamərɪz(ə)m/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN formed as METAMERE + -ISM.]
1 CHEMISTRY. Orig., the relationship of two or more compounds that have the same molecular formula but different properties (i.e. isomerism). Later, the relationship between organic compounds that have similar molecular structures and differ only in the alkyl groups or other substituents they contain. M19.
2 ZOOLOGY. The condition of consisting of several similar segments or metameres; metameric segmentation; an instance of this. L19.

metamerous /mɪˈtam(ə)rəs/ adjective. L19.
[ORIGIN from METAMERE + -OUS.]
ZOOLOGY. = METAMERIC 2.

meta-metalanguage /mɛtəˈmɛtəlaŋgwɪdʒ/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from META- + METALANGUAGE.]
A language used in the description of another language which is itself a metalanguage; the universal linguistic or symbolic system from which a particular metalanguage derives.

Amer.*) (a variety of) beer produced in a microbrewery L20. microbrewery noun (chiefly N. Amer.) a brewery which produces limited quantities of beer, often for consumption locally or on its own premises L20. microbrowser COMPUTING an Internet browser for use with mobile phones and other hand-held devices with small screens L20. micro'burin noun (ARCHAEOLOGY) the piece of stone that is snapped off a notched blade as waste when making a microlith M20. microburst noun a sudden strong air current produced by the impact with the ground of a fast localized downdraught M20. microbus noun a small passenger vehicle with seats fitted as in a bus M20. microcalo'rimeter noun an instrument for measuring very small amounts of heat E20. microcalori'metric adjective of or pertaining to microcalorimetry E20. microcalo'rimetry noun the use of a microcalorimeter; measurement of very small amounts of heat: E20. microcapsule noun a minute capsule used to contain drugs, dyes, etc. and render them temporarily inactive M20. microcar noun a small and fuel-efficient car L20. Microcard noun (US proprietary name for) an opaque card bearing microphotographs of a number of pages of a book, periodical, etc. M20. microcard verb trans. reproduce on Microcards M20. micro'cellular adjective (esp. of synthetic substances) containing or characterized by minute cells or pores E20. micro'chemical adjective of or pertaining to microchemistry M19. microchemist noun an expert in or student of microchemistry E20. micro'chemistry noun the branch of chemistry that deals with the reactions and properties of substances in minute quantities, e.g. in living tissue M19. microcinemato'graphic adjective of, pertaining to, or involving microcinematography E20. microcinema'tography noun the cinematography of very small objects with the aid of a microscope E20. microcircuit noun a minute electric circuit, esp. an integrated circuit M20. microcircuitry noun microcircuits collectively; the branch of electronics that deals with microcircuits: M20. microcirculation noun circulation of the blood in the smallest blood vessels M20. micro'clastic adjective (GEOLOGY) minutely clastic L19. micro'coccal adjective caused by, of, or pertaining to a micrococcus or micrococci L19. micro'coccus noun, pl. -cocci /-'kɒk(s)ʌɪ, -k(s)i:/, a bacterium of the family Micrococcaceae of Gram-positive spherical organisms L19. microcode noun & verb (COMPUTING) (a) noun microinstructions collectively; a single microinstruction; each of the bit patterns of which a microinstruction is composed; (b) verb trans. = MICROPROGRAM verb: M20. microcolony noun a group of animals or plants, esp. bacteria, found in a microhabitat; a very small group of cells in culture: E20. microcontinent noun (GEOLOGY) an oceanic, often submarine, plateau that is thought to be an isolated fragment of continental material M20. microconti'nental adjective (GEOLOGY) of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a microcontinent M20. microcontroller COMPUTING a control device which incorporates a microprocessor L20. microcook verb trans. & intrans. (US) = MICROWAVE verb L20. microcopy noun & verb (a) noun a copy of a text that has been reduced in size by the use of microphotography; microcopied form (chiefly in in microcopy); (b) verb trans. & intrans. make a microcopy (of): M20. microcrack noun a very small or fine crack M20. microcracking noun microcracks collectively; the occurrence or formation of microcracks: M20. microcredit noun the lending of small amounts of money at low interest to new businesses in the developing world L20. microcyst noun a bacterial or myxamoeboid resting cell, esp. one with a thick cell wall L19. microdegree noun a millionth of a degree centigrade (kelvin) M20. microdensi'tometer noun a densitometer for measuring the density of very small areas of a photographic image M20. microdensito'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or involving microdensitometry M20. microdensi'tometry noun the use of a microdensitometer; measurement of the density of very small areas of a photographic image: M20. microdermabrasion noun a cosmetic treatment in which the face is sprayed with exfoliant crystals to remove dead epidermal cells L20. micro'diorite noun (GEOLOGY) a rock similar to diorite but fine-grained E20. micro-e'lectrode noun an electrode with a very fine tip, e.g. for investigating the electrical properties of individual cells E20. micro-electropho'resis noun electrophoresis in which the migration of individual particles or cells is observed using a microscope M20. micro-electropho'retic adjective of, pertaining to, or involving micro-electrophoresis M20. micro-en'capsulate verb trans. enclose in a microcapsule M20. micro-encapsu'lation noun the process of enclosing in microcapsules M20. micro-engi'neering noun engineering on a very small scale, esp. combined with micro-electronics M20. micro-'enterprise noun (a) business operating on a small scale, esp. one supported by a programme of assistance in an economically deprived area or developing country L20. micro-environment noun (chiefly BIOLOGY) the immediate small-scale environment of a thing, esp. as a distinct part of a larger environment M20. micro-environ'mental adjective (chiefly BIOLOGY) of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a micro-environment M20. micro-evolution noun evolutionary change within a species or smaller group of plants or animals, usu. over a short period E20. micro-evo'lutionary adjective of or pertaining to micro-evolution M20. microfarad noun one millionth of a farad L19. microfauna noun (BIOLOGY) (a) fauna made up of minute animals; (a) fauna found in a microhabitat: L19. micro'faunal adjective (BIOLOGY) of or pertaining to microfauna M20. microfel'sitic adjective (GEOLOGY) cryptocrystalline L19. microfibre noun an extremely fine fibre; spec. (a fabric made from) a very fine synthetic yarn: M20; microfibril noun (BIOLOGY) a small fibril visible only under an electron microscope, esp. each of a group that together make up a fibril (such as a cellulose fibril in the wall of a plant cell) M20. micro'fibrillar adjective (BIOLOGY) composed of microfibrils M20. microfilament noun (CYTOLOGY) any of the small rodlike structures, about 4–7 nanometres in diameter, that are present in the cytoplasm of many eukaryotic cells and are thought to have a structural function and to be involved with cell motility M20. microfila'mentous adjective (CYTOLOGY) of or pertaining to a microfilament or microfilaments L20. microfi'laria noun (ZOOLOGY) the minute larval form of a filaria L19. microfinance noun = MICROCREDIT L20. microfloppy noun & adjective (COMPUTING) (designating) a floppy disk with a diameter less than 5¼ inches, 13.3 cm (usu. 3½ inches, 8.9 cm) L20. microflora noun (BIOLOGY) (a) flora made up of minute plants; (a) flora found in a microhabitat: E20. microfossil noun a fossil or fossil fragment that can only be seen with a microscope E20. microfracture noun a very small or fine fracture in a material M20. micro'fracturing noun the state of having microfractures; the formation of microfractures: M20. microfungus noun a fungus in which no sexual process has been observed or in which the reproductive organs are microscopic L19. microgamete noun (BIOLOGY) the smaller (usu. male) gamete in an organism where the male and female gametes differ in size L19. microga'metocyte noun (BIOLOGY) a gametocyte that gives rise to microgametes E20. microga'metophyte noun (BOTANY) a gametophyte that develops from a microspore; a male gametophyte: E20. microgram noun a millionth of a gram L19. microgranite noun (a) granite rock that is recognizable as crystalline only under a microscope L19. microgra'nitic adjective of, pertaining to, or of the nature of microgranite L19. micro'gravity noun very weak gravity, such as that in a spacecraft L20. microgroove noun a very narrow groove on a gramophone record M20. micro'gyria noun (MEDICINE) abnormal smallness of the gyri of the brain L19. microhabitat noun (ECOLOGY) a habitat which is of small or limited extent and which differs in character from some surrounding more extensive habitat M20. microhardness noun the hardness of a very small area of a sample, as measured by an indenter E20. microimage noun an image so small that it cannot be read etc. unaided M20. microinch noun a millionth of an inch M20. microin'ject verb trans. (chiefly BIOLOGY) inject into a microscopic object such as an individual cell; inject something into (such an object): M20. microin'jection noun (BIOLOGY & MEDICINE) injection on a microscopic scale, esp. into an individual cell or part of a cell E20. microkernel noun (COMPUTING) (in an operating system) a kernel which has only the most basic in-built functions and can be configured to suit different systems by the addition of software modules L20. microlending noun = MICROCREDIT L20. microlevel noun the most detailed or elementary level of a hierarchy M20. microlin'guistic adjective of or pertaining to microlinguistics M20. microlin'guistics noun the branch of linguistics that deals with the analysis of specific linguistic data, as contrasted with prelinguistics and metalinguistics M20. microlitre noun a millionth of a litre L19. micro-machining noun the process or technique of shaping objects on a very small scale esp. using laser or particle beams M20. micromanage verb trans. manage every part, however small, of (an enterprise or activity), esp. with undesirable avoidance of delegation L20. micro'management noun the action of micromanaging an enterprise or activity L20. micro'manager noun a person who (esp. habitually) micromanages an enterprise or activity L20. micro'mania noun (a) persistent or exaggerated tendency to belittle oneself L19. micro'maniac noun a person with micromania E20. microma'nipulate verb trans. manipulate as a microscopic scale or with a micromanipulator M20. micromanipu'lation noun the performance of extremely delicate operations (e.g. the isolation of single cells) under a microscope, esp. using a micromanipulator; an operation so performed: E20. microma'nipulator noun an instrument used to perform micromanipulations, allowing a micropipette etc. to be operated in the field of view of a microscope E20. micro'mastia noun [Greek mastos breast] the condition in a post-pubertal woman of having an abnormally small breast E20. micro'mazia noun [Greek mazos breast] = MICROMASTIA L19. micromere noun [Greek meros part] BIOLOGY a small cell formed by unequal division of an ovum or embryo, e.g. in sea urchins, and appearing at the animal pole L19. micromesh noun material (esp. nylon) consisting of a very fine mesh M20. micro'millimetre noun (a) a millionth of a millimetre, a nanometre; †(b) a thousandth of a millimetre, a micrometre: L19. micromodule noun (ELECTRONICS) a miniaturized module consisting of a stack of interconnected micro-elements M20. micro'molar adjective (CHEMISTRY) designating or involving amounts of the order of a micromole or concentrations of the order of one micromole per litre M20. micromole noun (CHEMISTRY) one millionth of a mole M20. micro'nodular adjective (MEDICINE) (esp. of a form of cirrhosis) characterized by the presence of small nodules M20. micro'nuclear adjective (ZOOLOGY) of or pertaining to a micronucleus L19. micro'nucleus noun (ZOOLOGY) the smaller of two nuclei in ciliated protozoa, concerned esp. with reproduction L19. micro'nutrient noun (BIOLOGY) any of the chemical elements which are required in trace amounts by organisms for normal growth and development M20. micro-o'paque noun & adjective (designating) a type of microform produced on card or paper instead of film M20. micro-oven noun a microwave oven M20. micropayment noun a very small payment made each time a user accesses an Internet page or service L20. micro'perthite noun (MINERALOGY) a form of perthite in which the lamellae are microscopic L19. microper'thitic adjective (MINERALOGY) of, pertaining to, or of the nature of microperthite L19. microphage noun [Greek phagein eat] PHYSIOLOGY a small phagocytic leucocyte L19. microphagous /mʌɪ'krɒfəgəs/ adjective [Greek phagein eat] BIOLOGY feeding on minute particles or micro-organisms E20. micropho'tometer noun an instrument for making photometric measurements of very small areas L19. microphoto'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or involving microphotometry M20. microphoto'metry noun the use of microphotometers M20. microphyll noun (BOTANY) a very short leaf, as in a clubmoss, with a single unbranched vein and no leaf gaps in the stele M20. micro'phyllous adjective having small leaves or (spec.) microphylls M19. micropipette noun a very fine pipette for measuring, transferring, or injecting very small quantities of liquid E20. microplankton noun plankton of small size, spec. between 50 micrometres and 0.5 millimetre E20. micropore noun a very small pore L19. micropo'rosity noun microporous condition M20. micro'porous adjective containing or characterized by micropores; microcellular: L19. micropower adjective generating, using, or pertaining to small amounts of power M20. microprism noun (PHOTOGRAPHY) an area of the focusing screen of some reflex cameras which is covered with a grid of tiny prisms and splits up the image when the subject is not in focus M20. microprobe noun & verb trans. (examine using) a microanalyser M20. micropro'jection noun the process of projecting an enlarged image of a microscopic specimen E20. micropro'jector noun an apparatus for microprojection M20. micropropa'gation noun the propagation of plants by growing plantlets in tissue culture and then planting them out L20. micropterous /mʌɪ'krɒpt(ə)rəs/ adjective [Greek pteron wing] ENTOMOLOGY having small wings E19. micropublication noun (a) publication in microform L20. micropublish verb trans. publish in microform (freq. as micropublishing verbal noun) M20. micropulsation noun a small oscillation in the strength of the earth's magnetic field M20. microreader noun an apparatus for producing an enlarged readable image from a microfilm or microprint M20. microrecord noun a documentary record in micrographically reduced form M20. micro'satellite (a) GENETICS a set of short repeated DNA sequences at a particular locus on a chromosome, which vary in number in different individuals and so can be used for genetic fingerprinting; (b) a very small space satellite: M20. micro-scale noun a small or microscopic scale; CHEMISTRY the scale of microanalysis: M20. microscooter noun a small, lightweight, two-wheeled foldable scooter, for either children or adults L20. microsecond noun one millionth of a second E20. microsection noun a very thin section of a specimen that can be mounted on a slide for microscopic examination L19. microsegment noun (PHONETICS) a unit of sound enclosed between two open junctures M20. microseism noun †(a) a minor earthquake; (b) an imperceptible disturbance of the earth's crust detectable by a seismometer but not caused by an earthquake: L19. micro'seismic adjective of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a microseism; (of data) obtained with a seismometer: L19. microsite noun (a) ECOLOGY a small, distinct area or habitat within a particular ecosytem; (b) COMPUTING a small auxiliary website designed to function as a supplement to a primary website: M20. microsleep noun a transitory state of sleep, esp. in a person deprived of normal sleep; a period or occasion of such sleep: M20. microslide noun a slide prepared for microscopic examination E20. microspecies noun (TAXONOMY) a species differing only in minor characters from others of its group, often one of limited geographical range forming part of an aggregate species L19. microspectropho'tometer noun an instrument for the spectrophotometric investigation of individual cells or particles M20. micro,spectrophoto'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or involving microspectrophotometry M20. microspectropho'tometry noun the use of microspectrophotometers M20. microsphere noun a minute sphere; spec. one obtained by cooling a solution of a proteinoid: L19. micro'spheric adjective of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a microsphere L19. microstate noun a very small country M20. microstrip noun (ELECTRICITY) a transmission line for microwaves that consists of dielectric material coated on one side with a metallic film forming a conducting strip and on the other with a metallic coating that serves as an earth; material of this kind: M20. microstylous adjective (BOTANY) having a short style in association with long filaments L19. microswitch noun a switch which can be operated rapidly by a small movement M20. microteaching noun (US) the teaching of a small group for a short time as part of a training or refresher course for teachers M20. microtechnique noun a technique for handling, preparing, or investigating very small amounts of something L19. microtech'nology noun technology that uses or is concerned with microelectronics or with components whose size is measured in microns M20. microtext noun (a) text that is micrographically reduced in size M20. microtopo'graphic, microtopo'graphical adjectives of or pertaining to microtopography M20. microto'pography noun surface features on a small or microscopic scale M20. microtra'becula noun, pl. -lae, CYTOLOGY a filament of the microtrabecular lattice L20. microtra'becular adjective (CYTOLOGY) pertaining to or designating a lattice of protein filaments in the cytoplasm of cells which is concerned with the transport of molecules in the cell L20. microtron noun (PHYSICS) a variant of the cyclotron in which electrons are accelerated by microwaves M20. micro'tubular adjective (CYTOLOGY) of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a microtubule M20. 'microtubule noun (CYTOLOGY) a small, relatively rigid tubule, present in numbers in the cytoplasm of many cells, thought to have a structural function and to be involved with cell motility M20. microunit noun (MEDICINE) a millionth part of a unit, esp. of an international unit (e.g. of insulin) E20. micro'vascular adjective of or pertaining to the smallest blood vessels E20. micro'villar adjective (CYTOLOGY) of, pertaining to, or involving a microvillus or microvilli M20. micro'villous adjective (CYTOLOGY) = MICROVILLAR M20. 'microvillus noun (CYTOLOGY) any of a number of minute projections from the surface of some cells; a process similar to a villus but smaller: M20. microwatt noun one millionth of a watt E20. microweld verb trans. join by a very small weld M20.

microanalyser /mʌɪkrəʊ'anəlʌɪzə/ noun. Also -lyzer. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + ANALYSER.]
An instrument in which a beam of radiation (usu. electrons) is focused on to a minute area of a sample and the resulting secondary radiation (usu. X-ray fluorescence) is analysed to yield chemical information.

microanalysis /ˌmʌɪkrəʊə'nalɪsɪs/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + ANALYSIS.]
CHEMISTRY. Orig., the analysis of very small samples, or very small areas of an object. Now spec. the quantitative analysis of samples weighing only a few milligrams.
■ micro'analyst noun E20. microana'lytical adjective E20.

microbe /'mʌɪkrəʊb/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN French, formed as MICRO- + Greek bios life.]
An extremely minute living organism, a micro-organism; esp. a bacterium that causes disease or fermentation.
■ mi'crobial adjective of, pertaining to, or caused by microbes L19. mi'crobially adverb by or with microbes M20. mi'crobian adjective (now rare) = MICROBIAL L19. mi'crobic adjective = MICROBIAL L19. mi,crobi'cidal adjective that kills microbes; of or pertaining to a microbicide or its action: L19. mi'crobicide noun & adjective (a) noun a microbicidal agent; (b) adjective (now rare) microbicidal: L19.

microbiology /ˌmʌɪkrə(ʊ)bʌɪ'ɒlədʒi/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + BIOLOGY.]
The branch of science that deals with micro-organisms.
■ microbio'logic adjective E20. microbio'logical adjective L19. microbio'logically adverb E20. microbiologist noun L19.

microcephalic /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)sɪ'falɪk, -kɛ'falɪk/ adjective & noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + -CEPHALIC.]
Chiefly MEDICINE & ANTHROPOLOGY. ▶A adjective. Having an abnormally small head or skull. M19.
▶B noun. A microcephalic person. L19.
■ micro'cephalism noun = MICROCEPHALY M19. micro'cephalous adjective = MICROCEPHALIC adjective M19. micro'cephalus noun, pl. -li /-lʌɪ, -liː/, (a) = MICROCEPHALIC noun; (b) = MICROCEPHALY: M19. micro'cephaly noun microcephalic condition M19.

microchip /'mʌɪkrə(ʊ)tʃɪp/ noun & verb. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + CHIP noun.]
▶A noun. A semiconductor chip, an integrated circuit, esp. one in which large-scale integration is employed. M20.
▶B verb trans. Implant a microchip under the skin of (a domestic animal) as a means of identification. L20.

microchiropteran /ˌmʌɪkrəʊkʌɪ'rɒpt(ə)rən/ adjective & noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from mod. Latin Microchiroptera (see below), formed as MICRO- + Chiroptera: see CHIROPTERAN.]
▶A adjective. Of or pertaining to the chiropteran suborder Microchiroptera, which comprises all bats other than megachiropterans, most of them insectivorous. L19.

M

▸ B noun. A microchiropteran bat. L19.

microclimate /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ),klʌɪmət/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + CLIMATE.]
The climate of a very small or restricted area, or of the immediate surroundings of an object, esp. where this differs from the climate generally.

F. POHL Outside . . the microclimate of my little garden . . the air was too thin and too dry.

■ microcli'matic adjective E20. microcli'matically adverb M20.

microclimatology /ˌmʌɪkrə(ʊ)klʌɪməˈtɒlədʒi/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + CLIMATOLOGY.]
The branch of science that deals with microclimates.
■ microclimato'logical adjective M20. microclimatologist noun M20.

microcline /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)klʌɪn/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN German Mikroklin, formed as MICRO- + Greek klinein to lean, slope (from its angle of cleavage differing only slightly from 90 degrees).] MINERALOGY. A triclinic potassium feldspar characteristic of granites and pegmatites, similar to orthoclase but forming large translucent crystals of a green, pink, or brown colour.

microcomputer /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)kəmˌpjuːtə/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + COMPUTER.]
A small computer or computer system, usu. one built around a single microprocessor; a home or personal computer. Also, a microprocessor.
■ microcomputing noun computing using a microcomputer L20.

microcosm /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)kɒz(ə)m/ noun. Also in quasi-Greek form microcosmos /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)ˈkɒzmɒs/. ME.
[ORIGIN French microcosme or medieval Latin micro(s)cosmus from Greek mikros kosmos little world.]
1 The world of human nature (as opp. to all nature); humanity viewed as an epitome of the universe. ME.

R. SCRUTON To step down from the world of national politics, into the microcosm of ordinary human relations.

2 A community or other complex unity regarded as presenting an epitome of the world, or as constituting a world in itself. M16.

S. RUSHDIE The street was his microcosm and afforded him all his delights and pains.

3 A miniature representation (of). E17.

G. A. SHEEHAN Like many sports, the marathon is a microcosm of life.

microcosmic /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)ˈkɒzmɪk/ adjective. L18.
[ORIGIN from MICROCOSM + -IC.]
Of or pertaining to a microcosm; of the nature of a microcosm.
microcosmic salt hydrated sodium ammonium hydrogen phosphate, $HNaNH_4PO_4{\cdot}4H_2O$, a crystalline compound originally obtained from human urine.
■ microcosmical adjective (now rare) microcosmic L16. microcosmically adverb M19.

microcrystal /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)krɪst(ə)l/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + CRYSTAL noun.]
A crystal visible only under a microscope.

microcrystalline /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)ˈkrɪstəlʌɪn/ adjective. L19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + CRYSTALLINE.]
Formed of microscopic crystals.
microcrystalline wax a high-molecular-weight hydrocarbon wax obtained from the residual lubricating fraction of crude oil, used in making waxed paper, adhesives, and polishes.
■ microcrysta'llinity noun M20.

microcyclic /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)ˈsʌɪklɪk, -ˈsɪk-/ adjective. E20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + CYCLIC.]
BOTANY. Of a rust fungus: having a short life cycle.

microcyte /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)sʌɪt, ˈmɪ-/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + -CYTE.]
MEDICINE. An unusually small red blood cell.
■ microcytic /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)ˈsɪtɪk/ adjective of the nature of, pertaining to, or characteristic of a microcyte; characterized by the presence of microcytes: E20. microcy'tosis noun the presence of microcytes in the blood L19.

microdot /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)dɒt/ noun & verb. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + DOT *noun*¹.]
▸ A noun. 1 A photograph, esp. of printed or written matter, reduced to the size of a dot. M20.
2 A tiny capsule or tablet of LSD. L20.
▸ B verb trans. Infl. -tt-. Make a microdot or microdots of. M20.

microdrive /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)drʌɪv/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + DRIVE noun.]
1 A small stepping motor or motor-driven apparatus for manipulating micro-electrodes. M20.
2 COMPUTING. A peripheral storage device for holding a cartridge similar to a microfloppy but containing a continuous loop of tape. L20.

microeconomics /ˌmʌɪkrəʊiːkəˈnɒmɪks, -ɛk-/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + ECONOMICS.]
The branch of economics that deals with small-scale economic factors; the economics of the individual firm, product, consumer, etc., rather than the aggregate. Cf. MACROECONOMICS.
■ microeconomic adjective M20. microe'conomist noun M20. microe'conomy noun a small-scale economic system M20.

micro-electronics /ˌmʌɪkrəʊɪlɛkˈtrɒnɪks, -ɛl-/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + ELECTRONICS.]
The branch of technology that deals with the design, manufacture, and use of microcircuits. Also, microelectronic devices or circuits.
■ micro-electronic adjective M20.

micro-element /ˈmʌɪkrəʊˌɛlɪm(ə)nt/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + ELEMENT noun.]
1 BOTANY. = MICRONUTRIENT. M20.
2 ELECTRONICS. A thin flat miniaturized circuit made with standardized length and width for assembly into a micromodule. M20.

microfiche /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)fiːʃ/ noun. Pl. same, -s. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + French fiche slip of paper, index card.]
A flat piece of film, usually the size of a standard catalogue card, containing microphotographs of the pages of a book, periodical, etc. Cf. FICHE *noun*².
– COMB.: microfiche reader a device for projecting a readable image of a microfiche on to a screen.

microfilm /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)fɪlm/ noun & verb. E20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + FILM noun.]
▸ A noun. (A length of) photographic film containing microphotographs of the pages of a book, periodical, etc. E20.
– COMB.: microfilm reader a device for projecting a readable image on to a screen from microfilm.
▸ B verb trans. Record on microfilm. M20.
■ microfilmer noun (a) a camera for producing images on microfilm; (b) a person who operates such a camera: M20.

microform /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)fɔːm/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + FORM noun.]
Microphotographic form; a microphotographic reproduction on film or paper of a book, periodical, etc., requiring magnification to produce a readable image.

microglia /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)ˈglʌɪə, mɪ-/ noun (usu. treated as pl.). E20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + GLIA.]
ANATOMY. 1 pl. Glial cells derived from mesoderm that function as macrophages (scavengers) in the central nervous system and form part of the reticuloendothelial system. E20.
2 sing. Tissue composed of such cells. M20.
■ microglial adjective E20.

micrograph /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)grɑːf/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + -GRAPH.]
An enlarged image of an object as seen through a microscope, obtained either by hand drawing or (now usu.) photographically.

micrography /mʌɪˈkrɒgrəfi/ noun. M17.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + -GRAPHY.]
1 The description or delineation of objects visible only under a microscope. M17.
2 The technique of producing micrographs or of studying objects by means of them. E20.
■ micrographer noun a person who produces micrographs M19. micro'graphic adjective M19. micro'graphically adverb by means of micrography or a micrograph L19. micro'graphics noun the production of photographically reduced texts M20.

microinstruction /ˈmʌɪkrəʊɪnˌstrʌkʃ(ə)n/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + INSTRUCTION.]
COMPUTING. Each of a sequence of instructions executed in response to a more comprehensive instruction; spec. one that corresponds to one of the smallest, most elementary operations in a computer and is produced in accordance with a microprogram.

Microlepidoptera /ˌmʌɪkrə(ʊ)lɛpɪˈdɒpt(ə)rə/ noun pl. M19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + LEPIDOPTERA.]
The numerous moths which are mostly smaller than those of interest to collectors. Cf. MACROLEPIDOPTERA.
■ microlepidopterist noun an expert in or student of Microlepidoptera M19. microlepidopterous adjective M19.

microlight /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)lʌɪt/ adjective & noun. L20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + LIGHT *adjective*¹.]
(Of, pertaining to, or designating) a small low-speed lightweight one- or two-seater aircraft of open construction, used for recreation and racing.
■ microlighting noun flying a microlight as a pastime or hobby L20.

microlite /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)lʌɪt/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + -LITE.]
1 MINERALOGY. A complex oxide of tantalum and niobium with sodium and calcium, crystallizing in the cubic system as yellow, brownish, or blackish translucent crystals. M19.
2 PETROGRAPHY. = MICROLITH 1. L19.
■ microlitic /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)ˈlɪtɪk/ adjective (PETROGRAPHY) of or pertaining to microlites; characterized by the presence of microlites: L19.

microlith /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ)lɪθ/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + -LITH.]
1 PETROGRAPHY. A microscopic acicular crystal with determinable optical properties, such as occurs in the groundmass of some rocks. L19.
2 ARCHAEOLOGY. A small shaped stone tool with a sharpened edge that was used with a haft, characteristic of Mesolithic cultures. E20.
■ micro'lithic adjective of or pertaining to microliths; PETROGRAPHY characterized by the presence of microliths; ARCHAEOLOGY characterized by the use of microliths: L19.

micrologic /ˈmʌɪkrə(ʊ),lɒdʒɪk/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + LOGIC noun.]
Micro-electronic logic.

micrology /mʌɪˈkrɒlədʒi/ noun. M17.
[ORIGIN Sense 1 from Greek mikrologia, formed as MICRO- + -logia -LOGY; sense 2 from MICRO- + -LOGY.]
1 The discussion or investigation of trivial things or petty affairs; hair-splitting. M17.
2 The branch of science which depends on the use of a microscope. Also, a treatise on microscopic organisms. M19.
■ micro'logical adjective M19. micrologist noun an expert in or student of the examination and description of microscopic objects M19.

micrometeoroid /mʌɪkrəʊˈmiːtɪərɔɪd/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + METEOROID.]
A microscopic particle in space or of extraterrestrial origin which is small enough not to suffer ablation in the earth's atmosphere.
■ micrometeor noun = MICROMETEOROID M20. micrometeo'ritic adjective of the nature of a micrometeorite; pertaining to or produced by micrometeorites: M20. micrometeo'roidal adjective of the nature of a micrometeoroid; pertaining to or produced by micrometeoroids: L20.

micrometeorology /ˌmʌɪkrə(ʊ)miːtɪəˈrɒlədʒi/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + METEOROLOGY.]
The branch of science that deals with the meteorological characteristics of a small area and with small-scale meteorological phenomena.
■ micrometeoro'logical adjective M20. micrometeorologist noun M20.

[ORIGIN French micromètre, formed as MICRO-: see -METER.]
An instrument or gauge for measuring very small objects or differences in size; esp. one in which linear movement is produced by turning a screw of fine pitch whose angular position is read as linear position.

micrometer *noun*² see MICROMETRE.

micrometre /ˈmʌɪkrəˌmiːtə/ noun. Also -meter. L19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + METRE *noun*².]
A millionth of a metre; = MICRON. (Symbol μ.)

micrometrical /mʌɪkrə(ʊ)ˈmɛtrɪk(ə)l/ adjective. E18.
Pertaining to or of the nature of a micrometer; obtained by the use of a micrometer.
■ micrometric adjective = MICROMETRICAL M19. micrometrically adverb by means of a micrometer M19. micrometry /-ˈkrɒmɪtri/ noun the measurement of very small objects; the use of a micrometer: M19.

microminiature /mʌɪkrəʊˈmɪnɪtʃə/ adjective. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + MINIATURE noun & adjective.]
Much reduced in size, as a result of microminiaturization; even smaller than a size regarded as miniature.
■ microminiaturi'zation noun extreme miniaturization; spec. the development or use of techniques for making electronic components and devices of greatly reduced size: M20. microminiaturize verb trans. produce in a very much smaller version M20.

micromotion /ˈmʌɪkrəʊˌməʊʃ(ə)n/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + MOTION.]
Small movements of the body recorded cinematographically for purposes of work study etc. Usu. attrib.

micron /ˈmʌɪkrɒn/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN Greek mikron neut. of mikros small.]
= MICROMETRE.

Micronesian /mʌɪkrəʊˈniːzjən, -ʒ(ə)n/ noun & adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from Micronesia (see below), intended to mean 'region of small islands', from MICRO- + Greek nēsos island + -IA¹, after Polynesia: see -AN.]
▸ A noun. A native or inhabitant of Micronesia, a group of small islands in the western region of the N. Pacific which includes the Caroline, Mariana, Marshall, and Gilbert Islands. Also, the group of Austronesian languages spoken in Micronesia. M19.
▸ B adjective. Of or pertaining to Micronesia, the Micronesians, or their group of languages. M19.

micronize /ˈmʌɪkrənʌɪz/ verb trans. Also -ise. M20.
[ORIGIN from MICRON + -IZE, or back-form. from Micronizer (proprietary name in the US).]
Break up into very fine particles.

■ microni'zation noun M20.

micro-organism /mʌɪkrəʊ'ɔːg(ə)nɪz(ə)m/ noun. Also microorganism. L19.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + ORGANISM.]
An organism too small to be seen except with the aid of a microscope, e.g. a bacterium or virus.

microphone /'mʌɪkrəfəʊn/ noun. L17.
[ORIGIN from MICRO- + -PHONE.]
1 An instrument by which quiet sounds can be made louder. Now rare. L17.
2 An instrument for converting sound waves impinging on it into variations in electric voltage or current, which may then be amplified or transmitted for reconversion into sound (as in broadcasting and the telephone) or recorded; esp. one made as an independent unit. L19.

B. MOORE Some with cameras, some with microphones and sound equipment.

■ microphoned adjective (a) containing or equipped with a microphone; (b) rare picked up and transmitted by a microphone: E20.

microphonic /mʌɪkrə'fɒnɪk/ noun & adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from MICROPHONE + -IC.]
▸A noun. 1 In pl. The branch of science that deals with the amplification of sound. rare. M19.
2 a ELECTRONICS. An undesired signal or modulation produced (e.g. in a valve) by mechanical vibration. Usu. in pl. E20. ▸b PHYSIOLOGY. A microphonic signal generated in the cochlea of the ear. M20.
▸B adjective. 1 Of or pertaining to a microphone or the use of microphones. L19.
2 Characterized by or pertaining to the production of variations in electrical potential in response to sound waves or vibrations; (of an electrical signal) produced by sound waves or vibrations. L19.
■ mi'crophony, mi'crophonism nouns (ELECTRONICS) the production of microphonics M20.

microphoto /'mʌɪkrə(ʊ),fəʊtəʊ/ noun. colloq. Pl. -os. L19.
[ORIGIN Abbreviation.]

formed from one molecule each of phosphoric acid, a sugar, and a heterocyclic base, that are the units of which nucleic acids are composed; a monomeric nucleotide: E20. mono'petalous adjective (BOTANY) (a) gamopetalous; (b) having one petal: L17. monophone noun (rare) PHONETICS a single sound; esp. a phoneme having no allophones: L19. monoph'thalmic adjective one-eyed M19. mono'phyllous adjective (BOTANY) having or consisting of one leaf M18. monopro'pellant noun & adjective (employing) a substance used as rocket fuel without an additional oxidizing agent M20. mo'nopterous adjective (BOTANY) (of a seed) having one wing M19. monopulse adjective designating (the mode of operation of) radar in which the direction and usu. the range of a target is determined from a single echo pulse M20. mo'norchid noun & adjective (a person or animal) having only one testicle L19. mo'norchidism noun absence of one testicle M19. mo'norchis noun, pl. monorchides /-ɪdiːz/, = MONORCHID noun E18. monose'mantic adjective (LINGUISTICS) (of a word or phrase) having only one meaning M20. mono'sepalous adjective (BOTANY) (a) = GAMOSEPALOUS; (b) having one sepal: M19. monospe'cific adjective (BIOLOGY) pertaining to or consisting of only one species; (of an antibody) specific to one antigen: E20. monospore noun & adjective (a) noun an undivided spore; (b) adjective = MONOSPOROUS: L19. mono'sporous adjective having a single spore; derived from a single spore: M19. mono'static adjective (of radar) having a single aerial as both transmitter and receiver M20. monostome noun & adjective (ZOOLOGY) (an animal) having only one mouth or sucker M19. mono'stylous adjective (BOTANY) having only one style M19. mono-'substituted adjective (CHEMISTRY) formed by or displaying mono-substitution L19. mono-substi'tution noun (CHEMISTRY) substitution affecting only one of the atoms or positions in a molecular structure L19. monosympto'matic adjective exhibiting or concerning a single dominant symptom L19. monosy'naptic adjective (PHYSIOLOGY) involving a single synapse M20. monosy'stemic adjective (LINGUISTICS) that establishes a single overall system of language analysis M20. monotherapy noun the treatment of a disease with a single drug M20. monothetic /-'θetɪk/ adjective (a) PHILOSOPHY (rare) that postulates a single essential element; (b) TAXONOMY (of a classification) having groups formed on the basis of a single characteristic, or a series of single characteristics: L19. mono'thetically adverb (TAXONOMY) on the basis of a single characteristic or a series of single characteristics M20. monotower noun & adjective (designating) a crane whose jib is mounted on a single tower M20. monotrochal /mə'nɒtrək(ə)l/ adjective [Greek trokhos wheel, ring] ZOOLOGY having a single band or ring of cilia L19. monotrophic /-'trəʊfɪk, -'trɒfɪk/ adjective (ECOLOGY) feeding on one kind of food, or one host organism E20. mono-un'saturated adjective (CHEMISTRY) (of a compound, esp. a fat) saturated except for one multiple bond M20. mo'novular adjective (BIOLOGY) monozygotic E20. monoxenous /mə'nɒksɪnəs/ adjective (BIOLOGY) [Greek xenos stranger] (of a parasite) restricted to a single host species M20.

monoamine /mɒnəʊ'eɪmiːn/ noun. Also monamine /mɒn'eɪmiːn/. M19.
[ORIGIN from MONO- + AMINE.]
BIOCHEMISTRY. Any compound having a single amine group in its molecule; spec. one which is a neurotransmitter (e.g. serotonin, noradrenaline).
– COMB.: monoamine oxidase an enzyme which catalyses the oxidation (and hence the inactivation) of monoamine neurotransmitters; monoamine oxidase inhibitor, any of a class of antidepressant drugs which inhibit the activity of monoamine oxidase (so allowing accumulation of serotonin and noradrenaline in the brain).
■ monoami'nergic adjective releasing or involving a monoamine as a neurotransmitter; (of a diet) rich in monoaminergic substances: M20.

†mono-andry noun see MONANDRY.

monoao noun var. of MANOAO.

monobasic /mɒnə(ʊ)'beɪsɪk/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from MONO- + BASIC adjective.]
CHEMISTRY. Of an acid: having one replaceable hydrogen atom. Formerly also, monovalent.

monoblastic /mɒnə(ʊ)'blastɪk/ adjective. L19.
[ORIGIN from MONO- + Greek blastos sprout, bud + -IC.]
1 BOTANY. Having a single germinal layer. L19.
2 PHYSIOLOGY. Of or pertaining to monoblasts. L20.
■ 'monoblast noun (PHYSIOLOGY) a cell which develops into a monocyte E20.

monobloc /'mɒnə(ʊ)blɒk/ adjective. E20.
[ORIGIN French, formed as MONO- + bloc BLOCK noun.]
Made as, contained in, or involving a single casting.

monobrominated /mɒnə(ʊ)'brəʊmɪneɪtɪd/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from MONO- + BROMINATE + -ED[1].]
CHEMISTRY. Having one bromine atom added to or substituted in the molecule.

monocarpellary /mɒnə(ʊ)'kɑːpəl(ə)ri/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from MONO- + CARPELLARY.]
BOTANY. Having or consisting of a single carpel.

monocarpic /mɒnə(ʊ)'kɑːpɪk/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from MONO- + Greek karpos fruit + -IC.]
BOTANY. Of a plant: bearing fruit only once during its life cycle.
■ 'monocarp noun a monocarpic plant M19.

monocarpous /mɒnə(ʊ)'kɑːpəs/ adjective. M18.
[ORIGIN In sense 1 from MONO- + CARPEL; in sense 2 formed as MONOCARPIC: see -OUS.]
BOTANY. 1 = MONOCARPELLARY. M18.
2 = MONOCARPIC. M19.

monoceros /mə'nɒs(ə)rəs/ noun. ME.
[ORIGIN Old French from Latin from Greek monokerōs, from monos MONO- + keras horn.]
†1 A unicorn. ME–M18.

[ORIGIN Irreg. from Greek mukēs fungus + -O-. Cf. MYCETO-.]
Forming chiefly scientific words relating to fungi, as mycology, mycoplasma, mycosis, etc.
■ myco'biont noun [-BIONT] the fungal component of a lichen (cf. PHYCOBIONT) M20. myco'herbicide noun a fungus, or a substance derived from one, used to destroy weeds L20. mycophile noun an enthusiast for fungi, esp. edible ones L19. myco'philic adjective fond of or feeding on wild mushrooms and toadstools M20. mycoprotein noun †(a) the supposed principal constituent of cytoplasm; (b) a protein of fungal origin, esp. one produced for human consumption: L19. mycotoxi'cosis noun, pl. -coses /-ˈkəʊsiːz/, a pathological condition caused by a mycotoxin M20. mycotoxin noun a toxic substance produced by a fungus M20.

mycobacterium /ˌmʌɪkə(ʊ)bakˈtɪərɪəm/ noun. Pl. -ia /-ɪə/. E20.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin (see below), formed as MYCO- + BACTERIUM.]
MEDICINE & BIOLOGY. Any of various Gram-positive, aerobic, filament-forming bacteria of the genus Mycobacterium or the family Mycobacteriaceae, including the causative agents of tuberculosis and leprosy.
■ mycobacterial adjective of, pertaining to, or caused by mycobacteria M20.

mycology /mʌɪˈkɒlədʒi/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYCO- + -LOGY.]
The scientific study of fungi. Also, the fungi of a district or region.
■ myco'logic, myco'logical adjectives of or pertaining to mycology or fungi M19. myco'logically adverb L19. mycologist noun M19.

mycophagy /mʌɪˈkɒfədʒi/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYCO- + -PHAGY.]
The eating of fungi, esp. (by a person) of those species usually neglected or avoided.
■ 'mycophage noun = MYCOPHAGIST M20. mycophagist noun a person who practises mycophagy; an animal that eats fungi: M19. mycophagous adjective fungus-eating, mycetophagous E20.

mycoplasma /mʌɪkə(ʊ)ˈplazmə/ noun. Pl. -mas, -mata /-mətə/. L19.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin Mycoplasma genus name, formed as MYCO- + PLASMA.]
BIOLOGY. Any of a group of pleomorphic, Gram-negative, chiefly parasitic micro-organisms without a cell wall, which are smaller than bacteria but, unlike viruses, capable of growth in artificial media. Also called pleuropneumonia-like organism.
■ mycoplasmal adjective of, pertaining to, or caused by mycoplasmas M20. mycoplas'mosis noun, pl. -moses /-ˈməʊsiːz/, a disease, esp. one of animals, caused by mycoplasma M20.

mycorrhiza /mʌɪkə(ʊ)ˈrʌɪzə/ noun. Also mycorhiza. Pl. -zae /-ziː/, -zas. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYCO- + Greek rhiza root.]
BOTANY. A symbiotic or slightly pathogenic fungus growing in association with the roots of a plant, either on the surface or within the cortex.
■ mycorrhizal adjective E20.

mycosis /mʌɪˈkəʊsɪs/ noun. Pl. -coses /-ˈkəʊsiːz/. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYCO- + -OSIS.]
MEDICINE. 1 A disease caused by fungal infection, as ringworm. M19.
2 mycosis fungoides /fʌŋˈgɔɪdiːz/ [mod. Latin = fungoid], a malignant, usu. protracted lymphoma mainly confined to the skin and resulting in dome-shaped tumours. L19.
■ mycotic /mʌɪˈkɒtɪk/ adjective pertaining to or of the nature of mycosis; mycotic aneurysm, aneurysm due to fungal or (usu.) bacterial infection: L19.

mycotrophy /mʌɪˈkɒtrəfi/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MYCO- + -TROPHY.]
BOTANY. The association of the roots of certain plants with mycorrhizae which apparently aid the uptake of nutrients.
■ mycotrophic /-ˈtrəʊfɪk, -ˈtrɒfɪk/ adjective of, pertaining to, or characterized by mycotrophy E20.

mycterism /ˈmɪktərɪz(ə)m/ noun. rare. Also (earlier) in Latin form †-ismus. L16.
[ORIGIN Greek muktērismos, from muktērizein sneer at, from muktēr nose: see -ISM.]
A jibe, a scoff; scoffing.

myctophid /ˈmɪktəfɪd/ noun & adjective. M20.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin Myctophidae (see below), from Myctophum genus name from Greek muktēr nose + ophis snake: see -ID³.]
ZOOLOGY. ▸ A noun. Any member of the family Myctophidae of deep-water marine fishes, having luminous organs along their sides. Also called lanternfish. M20.
▸ B adjective. Of, pertaining to, or designating this family. M20.

mydas fly /ˈmʌɪdəs flʌɪ/ noun phr. Also (earlier) midas fly. L19.
[ORIGIN from mod. Latin Mydas genus name.]
Any of various large insectivorous dipteran flies of the family Mydidae (Mydaidae).

mydriasis /mɪˈdrʌɪəsɪs/ noun. L17.
[ORIGIN Latin from Greek mudriasis: see -IASIS.]
OPHTHALMOLOGY. Excessive dilatation of the pupil of the eye.
■ mydriatic /mɪdrɪˈatɪk/ adjective & noun (a) adjective of, pertaining to, or causing mydriasis; (b) noun a drug that causes mydriasis: M19.

myel- combining form see MYELO-.

myelencephalon /mʌɪəlɛnˈsɛf(ə)lɒn, -ˈkɛf-/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + ENCEPHALON.]
ANATOMY. 1 The cerebrospinal axis or system. Now rare or obsolete. M19.
2 The medulla oblongata. L19.
■ myelencephalic, myelencephalous adjectives of or pertaining to the myelencephalon M19.

myelin /ˈmʌɪəlɪn/ noun. Also †-ine. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + -IN¹, -INE⁵.]
†1 CHEMISTRY. A phospholipid substance extracted from various animal and some plant tissues. M–L19.
2 A complex mixture of proteins and phospholipids which forms an insulating sheath around certain nerve fibres. L19.
– COMB.: myelin sheath the insulating layer of myelin laid down, usu. spirally, around the axons of certain nerve fibres by Schwann cells, which increases the rapidity of impulse conduction.
■ myelinated adjective (of a nerve fibre) enclosed in a myelin sheath L19. myelination noun the process of becoming myelinated; the state of being myelinated: L19.

myelitis /mʌɪəˈlʌɪtɪs/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + -ITIS.]
MEDICINE. 1 Inflammation of the spinal cord. M19.
transverse myelitis: see TRANSVERSE adjective.
2 Inflammation of the bone marrow, osteomyelitis. rare. E20.
■ myelitic /mʌɪəˈlɪtɪk/ adjective M19.

myelo- /ˈmʌɪələʊ/ combining form of Greek muelos, -on marrow, spinal cord: see -O-. Before a vowel also myel-.
■ myelo'genesis noun (PHYSIOLOGY) the formation of myelin, myelination E20. myelo'genic adjective (MEDICINE) originating in the bone marrow L19. mye'logenous adjective (MEDICINE) = MYELOGENIC; spec. designating a form of leukaemia: L19. myelogram noun (MEDICINE) (a) a radiograph obtained by myelography; (b) (a list of) the relative numbers of the various cells in a sample of bone marrow: M20. myelo'graphic adjective of or pertaining to myelography E20. myelo'graphically adverb by myelography M20. mye'lography noun (MEDICINE) radiography of the spinal cord after injection of a contrast medium or air into the subarachnoid space M20. myelomono'cytic adjective (MEDICINE) (of leukaemia) characterized by the presence in the blood of monocytes and their myeloid precursor cells M20. mye'lopathy noun (MEDICINE) disease of the spinal cord L19. myelope'roxidase noun (BIOCHEMISTRY) a greenish peroxidase occurring in granules in myelocytes and neutrophils M20. myelopro'liferative adjective (MEDICINE) characterized by or pertaining to the proliferation of cells of or derived from the bone marrow M20. mye'losis noun, pl. -loses /-ləʊsiːz/, MEDICINE (a) rare (the formation of) a tumour of the spinal cord; (b) the proliferation of blood-cell precursors in the bone marrow: M19.

myeloblast /ˈmʌɪələ(ʊ)blast/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + -BLAST.]
PHYSIOLOGY. An immature bone-marrow cell, the precursor of a myelocyte, appearing in the blood in certain diseases.
■ myelo'blastic adjective of, pertaining to, or involving myeloblasts E20. myeloblastosis noun the presence of abnormally large numbers of myeloblasts in the bone marrow and blood M20.

myelocele /ˈmʌɪələ(ʊ)siːl/ *noun*¹. Also -coele. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + -CELE.]
MEDICINE. Spina bifida in which the spinal cord is exposed over part of its length, usu. without protrusion as a swelling; an area of neural tissue so exposed. Cf. MYELOMENINGOCELE.

myelocele *noun*² var. of MYELOCOELE *noun*¹.

myelocoele /ˈmʌɪələ(ʊ)siːl/ *noun*³. Also -cele. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + Greek koilos hollow, cavity.]
ANATOMY. The central canal of the spinal cord.

myelocoele *noun*² var. of MYELOCELE *noun*¹.

myelocyte /ˈmʌɪələ(ʊ)sʌɪt/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + -CYTE.]
†1 The nucleus of a ganglionic nerve cell. M–L19.
2 PHYSIOLOGY. An immature bone-marrow cell derived from and smaller than a myeloblast, which gives rise to granulocytes and appears in the blood in certain diseases. L19.
■ myelocytic /mʌɪələ(ʊ)ˈsɪtɪk/ adjective of or pertaining to a myelocyte or myelocytes; involving myelocytes: L19.

myeloid /ˈmʌɪəlɔɪd/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + -OID.]
Chiefly MEDICINE. Of, pertaining to, involving, or resembling (the cells of) bone marrow.

myeloma /mʌɪəˈləʊmə/ noun. Pl. -mas, -mata /-mətə/. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + -OMA.]
MEDICINE. A malignant tumour of bone-marrow cells. Also (more fully multiple myeloma), myelomatosis.

myelomatosis /ˌmʌɪələ(ʊ)məˈtəʊsɪs/ noun. Pl. -toses /-ˈtəʊsiːz/. E20.
[ORIGIN from MYELOMA + -OSIS.]
MEDICINE. A malignant proliferation of plasma cells, which accumulate in the bone marrow, often associated with abnormal proteins in the blood and urine.

myelomeningocele /ˌmʌɪələ(ʊ)mɪˈnɪŋgəsiːl, -ndʒ-/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYELO- + MENINGO- + -CELE.]
MEDICINE. Spina bifida in which the spinal cord and its meninges protrude through the cleft, forming a rounded swelling; the tissue so protruding. Also called meningomyelocele. Cf. MYELOCELE *noun*¹.

myelon /ˈmʌɪəlɒn/ noun. Now rare or obsolete. M19.
[ORIGIN formed as MYELO-.]
ANATOMY. The spinal cord.

myenteric /mʌɪɛnˈtɛrɪk/ adjective. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + ENTERIC.]
ANATOMY. Designating or pertaining to a plexus of sympathetic and parasympathetic nerves situated between and supplying the two layers of muscle in the small intestine.
myenteric reflex an involuntary reaction of these muscles to stimulus, characterized by contraction of the intestine before the point of stimulation and relaxation after it.

mygale /ˈmɪgəli/ noun. LME.
[ORIGIN Late Latin from Greek mugalē.]
1 A shrew. Long rare. LME.
2 ZOOLOGY. A very large hairy mygalomorph spider of the American genus Mygale. M19.

mygalomorph /ˈmɪg(ə)ləmɔːf/ adjective & noun. E20.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin Mygalomorphae (see below), formed as MYGALE: see -O-, -MORPH.]
ZOOLOGY. ▸A adjective. Of or pertaining to the suborder Orthognatha (formerly Mygalomorphae) of (mainly large) spiders, including bird spiders, American tarantulas, funnel-web spiders, and trapdoor spiders. E20.
▸ B noun. A mygalomorph spider. M20.

myiasis /mʌɪˈʌɪəsɪs, ˈmʌɪəsɪs/ noun. Pl. -ases /-ˈʌɪəsiːz, -əsiːz/. M19.
[ORIGIN from Greek muia fly + -IASIS.]
MEDICINE. Infestation with maggots; (a) disease caused by this.

Mylar /ˈmʌɪlɑː/ noun. Also m-. M20.
[ORIGIN Arbitrary.]
(Proprietary name for) a polyester made by the condensation of ethylene glycol and terephthalic acid and used to make strong heat-resistant films.

mylodon /ˈmʌɪlad(ə)n/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin Mylodon (see below), from Greek mulē, mulos molar (lit. 'millstone') + -ODON.]
A gigantic extinct ground sloth of the genus Mylodon, with more or less cylindrical teeth, found in deposits from the Pleistocene epoch in S. America.
■ mylodont adjective & noun (pertaining to or characteristic of) a mylodon L19.

mylohyoid /mʌɪləʊˈhʌɪɔɪd/ adjective & noun. Also (earlier) in mod. Latin form -hyoideus /-hʌɪˈɔɪdɪəs/. L17.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin, from Greek mulē, mulos: see MYLODON, HYOID.]
ANATOMY. ▸A adjective. Connected with the lower jaw and the hyoid bone. Chiefly in mylohyoid muscle, a flat triangular muscle in the floor of the mouth. M19.
▸ B noun. The mylohyoid muscle. M19.
■ mylohyoi'dean adjective = MYLOHYOID adjective M19.

mylonite /ˈmʌɪlənʌɪt/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from Greek mulōn mill + -ITE¹.]
PETROGRAPHY. A schist, esp. a banded one, resulting from the grinding or crushing of rocks.
■ mylonitic /mʌɪləˈnɪtɪk/ adjective pertaining to or of the nature of a mylonite L19. myloniti'zation noun = MYLONIZATION E20. mylonitize verb trans. = MYLONIZE E20. myloni'zation noun the formation of mylonite E20. mylonize verb trans. convert into mylonite (chiefly as mylonized ppl adjective.) E20.

mynah /ˈmʌɪnə/ noun. Also myna, (earlier) mina. E17.
[ORIGIN Hindi mainā from Sanskrit madana, short for madana-śārikā, lit. 'love bird', from madana love + śārikā starling.]
Any of various birds of SE Asia and the Indian subcontinent that are related to starlings, some of which can mimic the human voice; esp. (a) Acridotheres tristis (introduced in southern Africa, Australia, and elsewhere); (b) Gracula religiosa (more fully hill mynah); also (Austral.) = MINER 4. Also mynah bird.

mynheer /mʌnˈheː, -ˈhɪə; məˈneː, -ˈnɪə/ noun. Also mijn-, (S. Afr.) meneer /məˈnɪə/. E17.
[ORIGIN Dutch mijnheer (Afrikaans meneer), from mijn my + heer lord, master.]
1 As a courteous form of address to or a title of a Dutch or Afrikaans man: sir, Mr. E17.
2 A Dutch or Afrikaans man, esp. a gentleman. E18.

myo- /ˈmʌɪəʊ/ combining form of Greek mus (genit. muos) muscle: see -O-. Before a vowel also my-.
■ myoball noun (BIOLOGY) a spheroidal syncytium cultured artificially from muscle cells, myotubes, or myoblasts L20. myoblast noun (EMBRYOLOGY) a cell which with other similar cells gives rise to a muscle fibre L19. myo'blastic adjective (EMBRYOLOGY) of or pertaining to myoblasts L19. myo'chemistry noun the biochemistry of muscular action M20. myo'clonic adjective pertaining to, affected with, or of the nature of myoclonus L19. myo'clonus noun (MEDICINE) spasmodic jerky contraction of groups of muscles, esp. in the limbs L19. myocoel noun [Greek koilos hollow] EMBRYOLOGY the cavity in the centre of an early embryonic myotome L19. myocyte noun (ZOOLOGY) a muscle cell; esp. (in some sponges) a contractile cell not part of an organized muscle: L19. myoe'lastic adjective (ANATOMY & PHONETICS) pertaining to or involving both muscular and elastic tissue E20. myoe'lectric adjective designating, pertaining to, or (esp. of a prosthetic limb) operated by the electric currents associated with muscular action M20. myoe'lectrically adverb by means of myoelectric currents M20. myoepi'thelial adjective (ANATOMY & ZOOLOGY) designating or pertaining to an epithelial cell containing contractile fibres, esp. in the body wall of coelenterates, and in the ducts of some mammalian glands L19. myoepi'thelium noun, pl. -ia, ANATOMY & ZOOLOGY (a) tissue composed of myoepithelial cells L19. myofi'broma noun, pl. -mas, -mata /-mətə/, MEDICINE = MYOMA L19. myofilament noun (ANATOMY & ZOOLOGY) any of the ultramicroscopic threadlike aggregates of protein molecules, thick filaments of myosin and thin filaments of actin, present in contractile cells, esp. in the myofibrils of striated muscle M20. myo'genesis noun (EMBRYOLOGY) the formation of muscular tissue L19. myo'genic adjective produced by or arising in muscle tissue M19. myogram noun a chart or record made by a myograph L19. myograph noun an instrument for displaying or recording muscular contractions and relaxations; (now usu.) an electromyograph: M19. myo'graphic adjective of or pertaining to a myograph M19. myohaemo'globin noun (BIOCHEMISTRY, now rare) = MYOGLOBIN E20. myo-i'nositol noun (BIOCHEMISTRY) an isomer of inositol which is present in animal and plant tissue and is a member of the vitamin B complex (also called meso-inositol) M20. myo'kymia noun [Greek kuma wave] MEDICINE any of several benign disorders associated with fasciculation of muscle fibres E20. myomere noun (EMBRYOLOGY) = MYOTOME M19. myo'meric adjective (EMBRYOLOGY) of or pertaining to myomeres L19. myoneme noun [Greek nēma thread] ZOOLOGY any of the contractile filaments in the cytoplasm of many protozoans L19. myo'neural adjective = NEUROMUSCULAR E20. myo'pathic adjective (MEDICINE) of, pertaining to, or of the nature of myopathy M19. my opathy noun (MEDICINE) (a) disease of muscle tissue M19. myoplasm noun (ANATOMY) = SARCOPLASM E20. myo'plasmic adjective = SARCOPLASMIC M20. myosar'coma noun, pl. -mas, -mata /-mətə/, MEDICINE a malignant tumour of muscular tissue M19. myo'septum noun, pl. -ta, ZOOLOGY a membrane which separates adjacent myomeres in lower vertebrates and the embryos of higher vertebrates L19. myotatic /-ˈtatɪk/ adjective [Greek tatikos exerting tension] PHYSIOLOGY (of a muscular contraction, esp. a reflex) caused by stretching of the muscle L19. myotube noun (EMBRYOLOGY) a cylindrical syncytial cell formed during the development of a muscle fibre from myoblasts M20.

MYOB abbreviation.
Mind your own business.

myocardium /mʌɪəˈkɑːdɪəm/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYO-, after pericardium.]
ANATOMY. The muscular tissue of the heart.
■ myocardiac adjective = MYOCARDIAL E20. myocardial adjective of or pertaining to the myocardium L19. myocar'ditis noun inflammation of the myocardium M19.

Myochrysine noun see MYOCRISIN.

myocomma /mʌɪəˈkɒmə/ noun. Pl. -mmas, -mmata /-mətə/. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + Greek komma segment, COMMA.]
EMBRYOLOGY. Orig. = MYOTOME. Now = MYOSEPTUM.

Myocrisin /mʌɪəˈkrʌɪsɪn/ noun. Also *-chrysine. M20.
[ORIGIN French Myochrysine, formed as MYO- + CHRYSO- + -INE⁵.]
PHARMACOLOGY. (Proprietary name for) sodium aurothiomalate, a gold-containing salt given intramuscularly to treat some cases of rheumatoid arthritis.

myofibril /mʌɪəˈfʌɪbrɪl/ noun. Also in Latin form -fibrilla /-fʌɪˈbrɪlə/, pl. -llae /-liː/. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + FIBRIL.]
ANATOMY & ZOOLOGY. Any of the numerous long cylindrical bundles of contractile myofilaments arranged in parallel in a striated muscle fibre.
■ myofi'brillar adjective E20.

myogen /ˈmʌɪədʒ(ə)n/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYO(SIN + -O- + -GEN.]
BIOCHEMISTRY. A mixture of albumins extracted from skeletal muscle plasma.

myoglobin /mʌɪəˈgləʊbɪn/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + GLOBIN, after haemoglobin.]
BIOCHEMISTRY. A red iron-containing protein which carries and stores oxygen in muscle cells, and resembles a subunit of haemoglobin in structure.

myology /mʌɪˈɒlədʒi/ noun. M17.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + -LOGY.]
1 The scientific study of muscles, esp. of their anatomical arrangement. M17.
2 (A description of) the muscular anatomy of a particular animal or part of the body. L17.
■ myo'logical adjective M19. myologist noun E19.

myoma /mʌɪˈəʊmə/ noun. Pl. -mas, -mata /-mətə/. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + -OMA.]
MEDICINE. A benign tumour composed of muscular tissue.
■ myomatous adjective pertaining to or of the nature of a myoma L19. myo'mectomy noun (an instance of) surgical removal of a myoma, esp. from the uterus L19.

myometrium /mʌɪəʊ(ʊ)'miːtrɪəm/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + Greek mētra womb + -IUM.]
ANATOMY. The muscular layer which forms the bulk of the wall of the uterus.
■ myometrial adjective E20.

myomorph /'mʌɪə(ʊ)mɔːf/ noun & adjective. L19.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin Myomorpha (see below), from Greek muo-, mus mouse + -MORPH.]
ZOOLOGY. ▸A noun. A rodent of the suborder Myomorpha, which includes the ratlike rodents (rats, most mice, voles, hamsters, dormice, jerboas, etc.). L19.
▸B adjective. Pertaining to or designating this suborder. L19.
■ myo'morphic adjective L19.

myope /'mʌɪəʊp/ noun & adjective. M18.
[ORIGIN French, from Latin myop-, myops from Greek muōps: see MYOPIA.]
▸A noun. A short-sighted person. M18.
▸B adjective. Myopic, short-sighted. L19.

myopia /mʌɪ'əʊpɪə/ noun. E18.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin from late Greek muōpia, from Greek muōps short-sighted, from muein blink, shut (an eye): see -OPIA.]
A condition in which distant objects appear blurred because their image is focused in front of the retina; short-sightedness (lit. & fig.), near-sightedness.
■ Also myopism noun E19. myopy noun (now rare) M19.

myopic /mʌɪ'ɒpɪk/ adjective & noun. E19.
[ORIGIN from MYOPIA + -IC.]
▸A adjective. Of, pertaining to, or affected with myopia; short-sighted, near-sighted. E19.

A. PRYCE-JONES She was very fair, with huge myopic blue eyes.
M. WEST Eyes scarcely visible behind thick myopic lenses. fig.: G. DURRELL They had been very myopic about the whole thing.

▸B noun. = MYOPE noun. L19.
■ myopical adjective (rare) = MYOPIC adjective M18. myopically adverb E20.

myosin /'mʌɪə(ʊ)sɪn/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + -OSE[2] + -IN[1].]
BIOCHEMISTRY. A protein which with actin forms the contractile filaments of muscle fibres.

myosis noun see MIOSIS.

myositis /mʌɪə(ʊ)'sʌɪtɪs/ noun. E19.
[ORIGIN Irreg. from Greek muos genit. of mus muscle + -ITIS.]
MEDICINE. (A condition characterized by) inflammation and degeneration of muscle tissue.

myosotis /mʌɪə(ʊ)'səʊtɪs/ noun. E17.
[ORIGIN Latin (see below) from Greek muosōtis, from muos genit. of mus mouse + ōt-, ous ear.]
A plant of the genus Myosotis; a forget-me-not. Formerly also, mouse-ear hawkweed, Pilosella officinarum.
■ Also 'myosote noun L19.

myotic adjective see MIOTIC.

myotome /'mʌɪətəʊm/ noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + -TOME.]
EMBRYOLOGY & ZOOLOGY. (Each segment of) a part of the embryonic mesoderm which gives rise to the skeletal muscles; esp. in fish and amphibians, each of a series of muscle blocks either side of the spine.

myotomy /mʌɪ'ɒtəmi/ noun. rare. L17.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + -TOMY.]
†1 (An anatomical treatise on) the dissection of muscles. L17–M18.
2 Surgical division of a muscle; an instance of this. L19.
■ myo'tomic adjective M19.

myotonia /mʌɪə(ʊ)'təʊnɪə/ noun. Also mya-. L19.
[ORIGIN from MYO- + Greek tonos TONE noun + -IA[1].]
MEDICINE. (A condition characterized by) an apparent inability to relax voluntary muscles after vigorous effort.
myotonia atrophica /ə'trɒfɪkə/ [Latin = atrophic] = DYSTROPHIA myotonica. myotonia congenita /kən'dʒɛnɪtə/ [Latin = congenital] a rare hereditary disease appearing in young children, characterized by myotonia without muscular wasting or other symptoms; also called Thomsen's disease.
■ myotonic /-'tɒnɪk/ adjective of, pertaining to, or affected by myotonia L19.

myrcene /'məːsiːn/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from mod. Latin Myrcia former genus name of bayberry + -ENE.]
CHEMISTRY. An oily liquid terpene found in essential oils of bayberry, hop, and other plants; 2-methyl-6-methylene-2,7-octadiene, $C_{10}H_{16}$.

myria- /'mɪrɪə/ combining form. Also (rare) myrio- /'mɪrɪəʊ/; before a vowel myri-. E19.
[ORIGIN from Greek murias, murios, or murioi: see MYRIAD.]
